

GPSG Competition – Call for Papers

Innovative Approaches to the Study of Greek Society and Politics

The Greek Politics Specialist Group is pleased to announce the launch of its latest paper competition. We invite submissions on any aspect of Greek society, government, policies or politics. The theme of this year's competition is Innovative Approaches to the Study of Greek Society and Politics. Therefore, emphasis will be placed on innovation, excellence, engagement and impact - whether through an innovative research design, methodology or technique; advanced thinking and scholarship; ground-breaking argumentation; or impact on academia, politics and communities.

Papers can be of a scholarly, conceptual, experimental, comparative, investigative, applied or even practical nature, including research proposals, interim reports, work in progress and preliminary findings, as long as they feature a robust rationale, clear objectives and appropriate outputs that advance our understanding or engagement with Greek society and politics.

A panel of judges will evaluate submissions based on these criteria and award three prizes:

1st prize: €300

2nd prize: €200

3rd prize: €100

The winning papers will also be published as part of the GPSG Working Paper series. This scheme allows authors to retain copyright on their papers so as to rework and publish them in academic journals and books, as long as that does not affect the GPSG's right to retain the submitted version of paper as part of its Working Paper series in perpetuity.
